Harry I. Corbett.

Funeral services for the late Harry I. Corbett, son of Mr. and Mrs. E. W. Corbett, were held at the Lisbon Congregational church on Friday afternoon at 1.30 o'clock, there being a large number of sorrowing relatives and friends present. Rev. Frank A. Fuller conducted the services, speaking of the young man's Christian life and conveying words of comfort to those who mourn him. The bearers were these close friends and members of his Sunday school class: Frederick Robinson, Paul Bradlaw, Charles Budett and Herbert Irons. The esteem in which the deceased was generally held was shown by the many beautiful flowers. Burial was in the Reade cemetery, where Rev. Mr. Fuller read a committal service. Undertaker George G. Grant was in charge of the funeral arrangements. Relatives and friends were present from Providence, Attleboro and Three Rivers, Mass., and New London.

Hawthorne Divorce Case.

There was a long hearing on three motions in the divorce case of Emma S. Hawthorne vs. Henry O. Hawthorne of New London. She asked for alimony during the trial, an allowance for a sum to defray the expenses of the suit and to employ counsel and an allowance for the support of minor children. children.

They were married twelve years ago Mrs. Hawthorne testified when called upon. She was the only witness. Mrs. Hawthorne told of her husband's dissipation. She said that she had brought suit against him for divorce and had attached his property in Norwich and his business in New London, later releasing the business attachment so that he could do business, leaving a keeper at $5 a day.

Mrs. Hawthorne said that her husband was away most of the time, frequently remaining away all night. She said that he went to a club in Salem and to "a singing club in New London near the Union station."

She said that her husband's business ranged from $700 to $1,000 a month. They had been married 12 years, she said, and had two children. She told of her husband coming home and abusing her, and that she had been obliged to go to a neighbor's house for protection.

Attorney Donald G. Perkins, who appeared for Hawthorne, questioned Mrs. Hawthorne. He asked her if Hswthorne had not gone to the Brown house in Thames street and there found Mrs. Hawthorne and Daniel Holloway. He asked that if it were not true that Hawthorne gave Holloway a beating. Mrs. Hawthorne said that she and Holloway had simply happene dto meet there, but admitted that they were sitting in a seat together. Attorney Perkins asked how Holloway happened to interfere once when she was quarreling with her husband. The reply was that the children had asked Holloway, who resided upstairs, to come down.

Mrs. Hawthorne said that she had left Hawthorne because he had given up the house in Howard street. She had brought suit for divorce from him and for alimony and custody of children, and had then taken the children and removed to New Haven.

Attorney C. Hadiai Hull for Mrs. Hawthorne, objected to some of Attorney Perkins' questions, and Judge Shumway sustained the objections, stating that the testimony would develop when the suit was heard.

Judge Shumway then said that Mrs.

Motion in Burns Case.

It was stated to Judge Shumway by State Attorney Hull that Judge Wheeler cannot hear the motion in the Addie Burns case for a new trial on the grounds of misconduct of a juror. Judge Shumway stated that he is willing to hear the matter, and it was agreed that when the criminal superior court is adjourned it will be for two weeks and a date can be set during that time for the Burns hearing.

Mrs. Martha Holmes Cushman of No. 29 Church street, Hartford, was 90 years old Friday, and she received a profusion of gifts, consisting largely of flowers, fruit and birthday cards, comling from many places in Connecticut and Massachusetts. Her many friends called at her home throughout the day and all enjoyed a happy chat with the near centenarian. To her callers Mrs. Cushman was beaming with smiles and good humor and seemed as clear-minded and as sprightly as many women thirty years younger than she except that she is a little lame, occasioned by a fall several years ago.

Stafford May 13, 1820, the daughter of Mr, and Mrs. Josiah Holmes, and comes from a race whose members are celebrated for their longevity. She is a lineal descendant of John and Capt. William Holmes, who with Samuel Holmes came over from England in the early 1820's and settled in the Plymouth colony. Mrs. Cushman was the oldest of eleven children, of whom three are living. Mrs. Eleanor Richmond of Cromwell, Mrs. Almira Patten of Stafford Springs and Mrs. Mary Hayes of Rockville.

Mr. and Mrs. Dwight Cushman were married in West Stafford in 1844, where they lived until going to Hartford in 1850. They lived on Windsor street in that city for seven years and then moved to their present home, where Mr. Cushman died five years ago. She has been a member of the Farmington avenue Congregational church for many years. She has always enjoyed excellent health and even now is obliged to use glasses only for reading and sewing. She talks interestingly of events in her early life. She attributes her long life to heredity and her own careful life. When a girl she was not much of a hand to go about, and when she first commenced she was obliged to he heaft in memced she was obliged to he heaft in memced she was obliged to he heaft in memced she was obliged to he heaft in a girl she was not much of a hand to go about, and when she first com-menced she was obliged to be back in the house by 9 o'clock in the evening. Later this time was extended to 10 o'clock, but it was not until after she was married. Her rule for living a long life is to go to bed in good sea-son, lead a quiet life, and above all keep away from saloons. Mrs. Cush-man says that it makes her ashamed of her own sex to read in the papers of her own sex to read in the papers of some of the doings of the suffragettes.
